Abstract

Education is the empowerment and the freedom for excellence for the human society. Nevertheless, the role of education in the half of the population of the women folk is lagging behind. It is especially more concern when talks in the sense of women from marginalized section of society, their empowerment, status, position in the society. The aim of higher education is to generate knowledge, encouraging critical thinking and imparting skills relevant to the society determined by its needs. The barrier to education for women in India was the persistent belief that women should not design to talk paid employment although voluntary work was acceptable. Supplement family incomes and today women are well represented in many occupations. However, access to higher education is often restricted for girls who live in rural areas or in towns without colleges or universities. The current study is qualitative in nature and based on secondary data. For this purpose, various government reports, magazine and journals have been used as it is a conceptual paper. Thus, the focus is to know more about the role of higher education in women's life. The primary objective of this study is to know the relevance of higher education in women's life. Furthermore, to identify the obstacle in the path of women empowerment. The author has discussed and evaluated the current status of women in higher education and in respect of their participation in higher education in order to assess the effectiveness of compensatory measure taken by the central and status governments to address the gender-based issues in higher education.

Introduction

To educate your women first and leave them to themselves, they will tell you what reforms are necessary Swami Vivekananda. In this contemporary world, women need to gain the same amount of power that men have. Now, it is time to forget that men are the only holders of power. In India, women are still facing different obstacles in male-dominated society. Women have generally been looked down upon with disdainful contempt. All sorts of strictures have been inflicted upon them, reducing their status to a mere plaything or a slave of man's whims, a mere chattel to be dumb driven. They have been confined to the hearth and home. The orthodox male-oriented society in India has still not been able to adjust itself to the fresh wave of women's liberation. But today the times have changed, the Indian woman has cast off her age-old shakes of serfdom and male domination. She has come into her own and started scaling the ladders of social advance with proud dignity. However, Indian women with slow pace are getting empowerment in the sector like education, politics, the work force and even more power within their own households. The worth of civilization can be arbitrated by the place given to women in the society.

Empowerment

The Oxford English Dictionary defines "empowerment" as "the action of empowering; the state of being empowered" and it was first used in this form in 1849. Since then, the term "empowerment" is used across across a wide range of disciplines and each brings different interpretations. Empowerment can be viewed as a way of creating a socially healthy environment in which one can make decisions and make choices, either individually or collectively for social change. The empowerment builds up the inherent ability by way of acquiring knowledge, power and experience (Hashemi Schuler and Riley, 1996). Empowerment is a factor shared by many disciplines and arenas. In recent empowerment literature, the meaning of the term empowerment has often assumed rather than explained or defined. However, some important definitions of empowerment have been mentioned below. According to Baily (1992) how we precisely define empowerment within our projects and programs will depend majorly on the specific people and context involved. Rappoport (1984) stated that it is easier to define empowerment by its absence, but difficult to define in action as it takes on different forms in different people and contexts. Even defining the concept is subject to debate.

Women Empowerment

"Woman is the builder and moulder of a nation's destiny. Though delicate and soft as a lily, she has a heart far stronger and bolder than a man, she is the supreme inspiration for the man's onward march, an embodiment of love, pity and compassion, she is no doubt, her commanding personality; nevertheless, is given by solemn"- Rabindranath Tagore Women which nearly constitute half of the population of the country are essential to play vital role in the growth and development of the country. A nation goes ahead only through the contribution of all its members. To realize the dream of becoming a developed country, there is a need for mobilization of women in large numbers by empowering them. Empowerment of women that will have long-term impacts must comprise of consciousness raising before the social structure of gender, which minions women in the family, class, caste, religion, or society, can be improved. Bookman and Morgen (1988) accepted empowerment as the recognition of the forces which act to dominate women and the motivation to change those factors in each woman's life which allow them to act. As Hall (1992) wrote in his literature "It is not the women's purpose to take power from men; rather, the goal of women is to develop their own power while respecting men for who they are" (1992: 104).

Women Empowerment and Higher Education

International Convention in all forms of Discrimination against Women (ICDAW) in 1993 mentioned that education is one of the most important means of empowering women with knowledge, skills and self-confidence, necessary to participate fully in the development process. Educating women benefit the whole society. It has a more significant impact on poverty and development than men's education. Higher education (such as graduation, postgraduation, professional courses, certificate diploma, Ph.D., etc.) is a discretionary last phase of formally discovering potential in a person. The privilege of access to higher education is referenced in various universal human rights instruments. Higher Education is the aggregate of organized knowledge and practical skills that let theoretical and practical problems to be solved by a given type of training, developing and creatively evolving the modern achievements of science, technology, and culture. The term "higher education" is as well applied to the training of highly skilled professionals in the fields of economics, science, technology, and culture in various types of higher schools, which accept persons who have successfully completed secondary general-education schools or secondary specialized-education institutions.

Higher Education System in India

At the time of independence, in 1947, there were only 20 universities and 500 colleges in the country. The number of students and teachers in the higher education system was also very small. But after independence, there has been an exponential increase in all these numbers. During 2017-18, there were 666 universities, including 129 deemed to be universities recognized by UGC. 313 have been state universities and 175 universities which have not been declared eligible to receive Central Assistance under Section 12(B) of UGC Act.

Role of higher education in Empowerment of Women

Universities should play a keen part in order to achieve the goal of cent per cent literacy in women population. Nevertheless, legislation and policy changes are crucial towards study of women as they are equal partner for development of the nation. At higher education level, major roles may take place which is highlighted below:

Scholarships for girls

Universities should start giving scholarships to the outstanding girls in different disciplines. It will also motivate girls from different societies to come ahead for education and compete with their classmates. These scholarships may be given in those areas where there is a need of girls for the development of society, e.g. nursing, teaching, pathology, pharmacy, etc.

Interaction of universities with girl's school

Universities should arrange seminars and extra time lectures by the experts in girls' school in different areas. These experts will share with girl students the possibilities of new areas where they can seek admission. Not only this, they will also make aware the girl students about the future need of the different subjects.

Start short term courses for women

Universities should offer new short-term courses for women like Yoga Education, Nursing, Cutting and Stitching, etc. These courses will help them to start work at their own for their economic independence. Along with it, university degrees will provide them better opportunities in the job market.

Developing relationship with industries

Universities should start the relationship with different industries. By doing so, the university authorities should apprehend the type of jobs in different areas. Along with it, they can also find out the jobs which are suitable for girls. They can start such courses with the help of different industries. Also, these industries will provide placement to the girl students.

Obstacles in the path of women empowerment

In the 21st century, women began to get educated and take part in the social, legal economic and political field. Now women are not in boundaries, they are awake and moving towards progress. In India there is the persistent belief that women should not deign to take paid employment although voluntary work was acceptable. Yet, the census 2011 indicates that the literacy rate of women in India is only 64%, i.e. below the average which is 74%. Lack of education is the root base of women's exploitation and ignorance. Only education can help women to know about the rights and duties given in the Indian constitution. furthermore, there are some more obstacles which hinder the empowerment of women. These are discussed below:

Social Norms

Many societies in India restrict women from leaving the house, given to their orthodox belief and age old traditions. Women in such societies are not allowed to go outside either for education or for employment and are forced to live an isolated and dejected life. Women living under such conditions become accustomed to being inferior to men and are unable to change their present social and economic state.

Workplace Sexual Harassment

Workplace sexual harassment is the most significant barrier to women empowerment in India. Private sectors like hospitality industry, software industry, educational institutions, and hospitals are some of the worst affected. It is a manifestation of deep rooted male supremacy in the society. There had been a steep rise of about 170% in the workplace sexual harassment of women in India in the past couple of decades.

Gender discrimination

Majority of women in India still face gender discrimination at work place as well as in the society. Many societies don't allow the women to go out for employment or education. They are not allowed to take independent decisions either for work or for family, and are treated inferior to men. Such discrimination of the women leads to their socio economic decline and hugely contradicts "Woman Empowerment".

Child Marriage

Though, India has successfully reduced child marriages in the past few decades, through a number of laws and initiatives taken by the government; still a report in early 2018 by the UNICEF (United Nations Children Emergency Fund) states that nearly 1.5 Million girls in India get married before they turn 18. Early marriage reduces the growth prospects of girls who soon be moving onto adulthood. 5. Crimes against Women Indian women have been subjected to domestic violence and other crimes such as – dowry, honor killing, trafficking etc. It's strange that the women in urban areas are more prone to criminal assault than the women in rural areas. Even working women in big cities avoid using public transport in late hours, fearing their modesty and life.

Conclusion

The emphasis of this study is to know about the role of higher education in women empowerment. Higher education was recognized as a powerful instrument of social- economic advancement of the society in general and a vehicle for upward social mobility for deprived and marginalized sections in particular. The role of higher education in bringing out the importance of women and their position in Indian society. It is especially more concern when talks in the sense of women from marginalized section of society, their empowerment, status, position in the society and the role of education in the higher and other strata of educational fields. The grant or financial support and the support of the family are like a catalyst in bringing the change in the status and position of women in society through the promotion of education. The study also discussed the obstacles such as social norms, workplace sexual harassment, gender discrimination, child marriage, etc. in the path of women empowerment.
